Position and Placement

Bro. John Kennon

He is going to lead you to it so he can lead you through it!

Your “position in God and understanding of that position will directly determine your “placement” in His will.

As an opening text for this book, I chose the following passage in Hebrews. It illustrates the initial calling of a Christian but emphasizes further deeper and wider calling to grow from a sapling rooted in Christ into a forest of trees for generations to come and enjoy. It calls for us to find the river of living water and allow it to not only wash us clean but bring forth living water that is a wellspring of life for others.

Heb 6:1 Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God,

Heb 6:2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

Heb 6:3 And this will we do, if God permit.

To give a summary of the contents of this book I have written a storybook style opening introducing two characters named Silas and Ephraim.

As you read put yourself in their shoes and imagine if you can relate.

A New Beginning on the Narrow Trail

Ephraim tightened the leather straps on his worn sandals, squinting under the morning sun. The path winding before him was steep and rocky, disappearing high into the mist-shrouded mountains. A gentle breeze ruffled his hair, carrying the scent of pine and promise. Behind him, a peaceful valley spread out—fields he’d sown, lessons he’d learned, comfort he could cling to. But something in his heart whispered that there was more; a higher place calling him onward.

He recalled an evening by the fire when his wise mentor, Silas, had opened a scroll of ancient words. “Therefore leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection…” Silas read from Hebrews. “We must press forward, Ephraim—beyond the simple beginnings—because our King desires to grow us in faith. Sometimes He leads us to lofty summits just to show us He can guide us through them.”

Ephraim remembered Silas tracing a knot of rope in his hands as he taught. “Your position in God,” Silas had explained, “is how you stand before Him—rooted in truth, sure of your calling. But that position must settle firmly in your soul if you want to walk in your placement, that unique purpose He has for you. If you’re not grounded in who you are, you’ll be shaken by every challenge.”

At sunrise the next day, Ephraim found a small parchment tucked under his door. On it, Silas had written: He is going to lead you to it so He can lead you through it. That cryptic message echoed in Ephraim’s mind as he now took the first step up the winding trail. Each footfall felt like a small act of faith. He was leaving behind the “elementary teachings”—like a child leaving a beloved sandbox—to pursue something deeper and richer in God.

The climb tested him. Loose stones slid beneath his feet, stinging dust coated his throat. By midday, he collapsed against a boulder, exhausted and uncertain if he could continue. Doubts buzzed in his mind: Am I in the right place? Should I have stayed in the valley? Maybe I’m not ready.

But then he remembered the words: not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God. This journey was about moving forward—trusting that the One who called him was strong enough to support him.

Leaning his head back against the warm stone, Ephraim prayed, “Lord, I believe You led me here. Show me the next step. Help me keep going.” A quiet peace replaced his panic. He rose, dusted himself off, and pressed on.
